FOREWORD.—With this number the VIRGINIA LAW REVIEW begins its seventh volume. It is the purpose of the Board of Editors to pursue the same general policy which has been followed in the past, publishing articles of interest to the entire profession and comments upon the recent decisions of courts of record throughout the United States. However, due to the insistent request of many of our readers, we have thought it well, although retaining our character as a general rather than a local law journal, to establish a new section devoted exclusively to comment upon the decisions and statutes of Virginia. The leading articles in the REVIEW will be prepared by prominent members of the Bench and Bar and by teachers of the profession, while the Notes, Recent Decisions, and the greater part of the Virginia Section will be entirely the work of the members of the Board—undergraduates in the Law School.

We wish to take this opportunity of expressing our sincere gratitude to the contributors of leading articles. It is to those who have contributed articles in the past that we owe whatever success the REVIEW has achieved, and to those who have so generously promised to contribute in the future that our chief encouragement is due.
